

Rapid Rescore Guide

Requesting expedited bureau updates when acceptable documentation is available.

Last Updated: June 2026 • Version 1.0

What Is a Rapid Rescore?

Rapid Rescore is used to request expedited updates through the credit bureau rescore process when acceptable documentation is available.

Rapid Rescore may help update credit information faster when documentation meets bureau requirements. Processing times and results may vary by bureau and by the documentation provided. Rapid Rescore is not credit repair and does not guarantee a score increase or bureau update.

A new credit report may be required after a Rapid Rescore is completed, depending on workflow and account setup.

This is commonly used when a borrower has:

- Paid down an account
- Paid off an account
- Had information corrected on a credit report
- Needs dispute comments removed

The Types of Rapid Rescore Requests

1 | Regular Rapid Rescore

The most common type. Use this when the borrower has documentation showing an account has already been paid down, paid off, or updated.

2 | No-Document Rescore

Use this when the borrower does not have proof documents available. In some cases, the bureau may verify the information directly with the creditor. Additional steps such as borrower authorization or a conference call may be required depending on the bureau and situation.

3 | Dispute Removal Rescore

Use this when dispute comments need to be removed from the borrower's credit report. The borrower must complete and sign a dispute removal form that includes the account name and account number.

4 | Account Deletion / Removal

Use this to request that a specific account be completely removed from the borrower's credit report — typically when the account is reporting in error or does not belong to the borrower.

■ Important Reminder

The proof document must specifically state that the account has been deleted. Documents using future-tense language will not be accepted.

Proof Document Requirements

Proof documents must clearly show:

- Creditor name or logo
- Borrower's full name
- Last four digits of the account number (or full account number)
- Current balance, payment amount, or account status being verified
- Date on the document

Example of weak documents which are not accepted by the bureaus

- Documents which contain future-tense verbiage. (i.e. "The account will be removed.")
- Current balance is not shown updated due to payment is still pending to be cleared.
- Transaction receipts for any kind of payment that requires to be shown updated.
- Creditor logo or name does not match what is shown on the credit report tradeline.
- Account number is missing or does not match what is shown on the credit report.
- Cell phone screen-shots are not accepted as a form of proof document by the bureaus
- Photos of paper statements or letters. (bureaus require paper documents to be scanned and in PDF file format.
- Date is missing on proof document
- Name of borrower is missing on proof documents
- Creditor logo/letter head is missing from the document

Before Submitting Checklist

- Correct borrower file is being used
- Correct account is selected
- Account number matches the credit report
- Proof document is clear and fully readable
- Proof document shows completed action — not pending action
- Document includes: creditor name, borrower name, account number, date, and balance or status
